Changes domestically and internationally continue to remind us of the importance of emergency preparedness. These changes have prompted enhanced measures designed to ensure the safety of both employees and customers of the Federal government. Workplace safety is of the utmost importance. For employees with disabilities and their managers emergency preparedness, which may include finding shelter and/or evacuating a building, can be an especially daunting task. At this Seminar, participants from within the Metro area and the 10 Federal regions will have a chance to learn about effective practices used by various Federal agencies, as well as an opportunity to exchange information regarding the development, implementation, and maintenance of emergency preparedness plans that are disability-friendly.

Please plan to join us. More information coming soon.

There is no cost to attend this Seminar. Accommodations will be provided for people with disabilities upon request.
